Live proactive

Terra Alegria Community-Supported Agriculture (TACSA) is a self sustainable model that connects the producer and consumers within the community. Enjoy the fresh produce that's grown organically for greater health and community bonding.

TACSA is community driven agriculture model in lush green open spaces of Terra Alegria. This approach will allow the residents to have the fresh food everyday at nominal prices on non-profit basis. TACSA is run by residents who are part of m1 Terra Alegria community.

The Produce includes in-season fruits like Mangoes, chiku, banana, papaya, guava etc.; vegetables like spinach, lettuce, onions, carrot, brinjal, okra, radish, green chilli, potato etc. The residents' association updates the community on what is happening on the farm, inviting them for harvest, or holding an open-farm event.

- Organic vegetable farming
- Traditional trees like Mango, Neem, Orange, Tamarind etc
- Rainwater harvesting pits
